Modern British sterling silver thimble makers still to be identified

1960 - 2022

These thimble makers' – or sponsors' - thimbles are images from my archives. None of these makers' names appear in the list of silver makers for any of the British Assay offices: most of the initials (with no other details) appear in the following website

Silver Makers Marks

Do you know who any of these thimble makers are?

See their lovely thimble creations

The listing is in the order of the last initial, which is probably the last name, in keeping with the main topic, where the maker's name is known

I can transfer them to those pages when the maker's name is identified The assay office is listed where known, as well as an assay date

 Makers cannot be identified because of GDPR = General Data Protection Regulations (these regulations prevent Assay offices giving out the person's name as they have not given prior permission as they registered after 1975)

We may never know these names
